Since 2022, more than 100 people have been arrested on trumped up charges of domestic terrorism, arson, money laundering, charity fraud, and trespass, among others. On August 29, Attorney General Chris Carr indicted sixty-one people under Georgia's Racketeer Influenced and Corruption (RICO) Act. This is a clear effort by the state to silence dissent, and all those arrested and indicted need our strong support!

The Purpose

The following statement was drafted by supporters of the more than 100 people arrested in defense of the Weelaunee Forest, and in resistance to Cop City, a massive $110 million training facility proposed by the Atlanta Police Department and funded in part by the Atlanta Police Foundation.

The intent of the statement is to provide a public platform for organizations around the world to express their collective opposition to these charges.

We Demand That All Charges Be Dropped

We are calling on the Georgia Attorney General to:

- (1) drop the RICO charges filed against 61 brave souls, as well as charges of domestic terrorism, arson, and money laundering
- (2) Stop the pursuit of pending charges against any Cop City protestor arrested since 2021.

Overview of RICO and Other Cop City-Related Charges

Since spring 2021, a grassroots movement in Atlanta has prevented construction for what would become the largest police training facility in the US. The Atlanta Police Foundation (APF) seeks to turn 300 acres of the Weelaunee forest into a tactical training compound, featuring a mock city, with the intention of further militarizing the US police force. Another 170 acres of forest are being threatened by a film production company, Shadowbox Studios, which plans to turn the adjacent Intrenchment Creek Park into the largest movie soundstage complex in the US. This model of police training is not an issue that only affects the Atlanta community, as this is a design ready to be utilized nationwide by leaders of many cities, endorsing their development with corporate backing.

Residents have opposed this project by every means possible, utilizing student walk-outs, speak-outs at City Hall, marches, sabotage, and over a year-long encampment inside the forest. More than 116,000 Atlantans signed a referendum petition that would put Cop City on the ballot which is more than the number of people who voted in the last primary election cycle and double the amount of what is needed to put a referendum on a ballot. The city is doing everything they can to block the referendum. Cop City's contractors and funders all over the country have been pressured by protesters to drop their contracts and divest from the project. Because the movement has built serious power in defense of the earth and in resistance to policing, it is facing unprecedented repression. People in power in Atlanta are getting away with abandoning democratic processes, disenfranchising Black, Brown, and low-income people through voter suppression efforts, and enforcing legal action against anyone opposing Cop City.

Protesters occupying the Weelaunee forest to prevent deforestation and general Cop City development have faced police brutality. On January 18, 2023, during a multi-agency police raid into the Weelaunee forest, police shot and killed Manuel "Tortuguita" Terán. An autopsy revealed that Tortuguita's hands were raised when they were murdered by the police, and that they were seated cross-legged.

In an effort to criminalize the Stop Cop City movement, the state has arrested over 100 people on fabricated charges related to the movement. Forty-one have been arrested on domestic terrorism charges for simply being in the forest or being at a protest. The local nonprofit bail fund, which has provided support to people arrested at protests over the last decade, faces money laundering and charity fraud charges. In September 2023, Georgia Attorney General Chris Carr indicted 61 people on state RICO charges, and they are being tried in Fulton County. More recently, local, state, and federal law enforcement agencies have raided the homes of Atlanta residents and harassed those they believe to be affiliated with the movement to defend the Weelaunee forest.

We cannot let the State of Georgia criminalize the people who are bravely practicing their constitutional right to protest, protecting the environment and land of Indigenous people, and demanding that the state follow legal protocol when developing within the Atlanta community.
